

Quantum engineering of molecules and cold atoms

Jim McCann

Queen's University, Belfast, North Ireland

There is increasing interest in the use of atomic and molecular systems for devices that operate on quantum principles; primarily the effects of coherence and entanglement. In this talk I will describe how these effects arise in photodissociation of diatomic molecules and excitations of trapped cold atoms and how this is related to quantum measurements and logical operations.